The Gothenburg Award
For Sustainable Development

The Gothenburg Award for Sustainable Development is the city's international prize that recognizes and supports work towards sustainable development. The first winner was awarded in 2000. The award is 1 million Swedish krona (SEK) and it highlights the possibilities and measures needed for a brighter future.

Learning from Failing Dialogues for Sustainable Urban Development

Come listen to inspiring stories about when dialogues for urban development didn't go as expected.

You will share your lunchtime with eminent experts with different roles in sustainable urban development. They will share their failures and what they have learned when sustainable urban development is headed by participatory design, including citizens as part of the solution rather than as the problem, creating bridges of trust between people, government and business.
